If you're into stuff like this, you can read the full review. I obviously enjoyed reading these dialogues. Central to the vision Plato attributes to Socrates is his famous Theory of Forms which holds that there is an ultimate truth one must strive .

Socrates use the Form to prove that the soul can live on because it is immortal. As one ages, however, they begin to dissatisfy - there is no way these people could be real. But the prosecution is largely silent, and we can more clearly analyze what Socrates does. He was mentored by Socrates and in turn mentored Aristotle, even though the latter became somewhat of an opponent.

Description'Consider just this, and give your mind to this alone: whether one claims that a vase, or anything else, is beautiful one is recognizing in that object the ideal form of beauty in which that object participates. He agrees on the soul maybe transfer during life and death, but sooner or later the soul will deteriorate and die.
