Jack London shows his interest in Freud's analysis of symbolism in dreams, as he uses this device to describe the primitive man in Buck's visions. From then on, night and day, Buck never left his prey, never gave it a moment's rest, never permitted it to browse the leaves of trees or the shoots of young birch and willow. He,too,satdownandhowled.From the camp came the faint sound of many voices, rising and falling in a sing-song chant. As he gets closer to camp, he suddenly begins to feel that something very bad has happened.
