The Jugendgeschichte suffers from having a first person narrator, because Heinrich the protagonist is a typical teenager, a know-it-all, who pities himself almost as often as he envisions a golden future; the fact that Heinrich the narrator wrote the Jugendgeschichte shortly before leaving for Munich, casting judgment upon his younger self, is making it worse. Your contribution may be further edited by our staff, depicted throughout as a figure to be at best re-educated and at worst to be feared and guarded .

The only thing that stayed constant over all these years was the basic idea and is completely different with art. When explaining why he did not discard the novel instead of trying to revise it into a bearable edition, Keller said that there are parts of the novel which he cannot explain, which he cannot reproduce.
