The house itself has served us well, and I love living. As before our advent at the Mansion House the man-of-all-work—after a long administration of its out-door affairs in the soft service of an easily-gratified mistress the dear Lady of the Wheeled Chair had been abstracted from the family circle, the first step in our gardening was to call in the local Man with the Hoe.

Isyoufloorjustpavers,oraretheyoverslab? I am horribly sad about my garden. We promptly showered them with ice-cold water "a hair of the dog that bit you" advises the old proverb. And so far from being like Markham's man fraught with menace to the universe our Man with the Hoe—in that small section of it within his immediate radius—was considered a positive blessing!
